Cyber Snoop, Internet Monitoring And Control Software, Included On CD-ROM Samplers Distributed With General Mills Cereal Boxes Nationwide

Exton, PA - November 15, 1999 - Upon purchasing General Mills' Cinnamon Toast Crunch and/or Frosted Cheerios cereal this November, parents will take an extra step in promoting their children's entertainment as well as safety. Pearl Software has teamed with Channelware, General Mills (GIS), Disney Interactive (DIS), and EarthLink (ELNK), a leading Internet service provider, to distribute a promotional CD-ROM sampler disc. This disc will include interactive CD-ROM games, limited free Internet access and Pearl Software's Cyber Snoop. This Internet monitoring and control software encourages responsible Internet usage and safeguards personal information allowing complete control over all Internet activity.

While the Internet is abundant with valuable activities and resources, a large portion of it remains for adult audiences only. The five million CD-ROM samplers that will be shrink-wrapped to the front of the cereal boxes will provide extensive interactive entertainment for kids as well as parental monitoring and control over Internet content. A 60 day trial version of Cyber Snoop provided on the sampler disc can be run in stealth mode and can easily be upgraded to a non-expiring version by purchasing an activation key from Pearl Software.

"By providing the children with 'good clean fun' and the parents with the means to protect their children from inappropriate material or interaction on the Internet," says Pearl software's CEO, David Fertell, "the Internet can be an invaluable tool for entertainment, research and learning for the whole family."
